OF JERUSALEM

The Program in Cultural Studies, a graduate program at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, seeks to fill one half of a tenure-track position beginning July 2018. This search is open to scholars in all subfields of Cultural Studies, although particular consideration will be given to expertise in the fields of Visual Culture, Digital Culture, Consumer Culture, and Critical Theory. Junior and senior scholars are encouraged to apply.

The position will be a joint appointment with other departments or programs in the Faculty of Social Sciences, including Communications, International Relations, or European Studies. Candidates whose research interests overlap with these fields or disciplines must also apply to one of the programs or departments listed above for the second half of the tenure-track position. Applicants will be competing with other candidates in the Faculty of Social Sciences.

Ideal candidates are expected to have a record of publication of innovative and high-quality research in top-tier journals and/or book publications. They are expected to present a substantial scholarly and pedagogical agenda. They must show competence in addressing the interdisciplinary nature of Cultural Studies with respect to research methodologies and teaching. Candidates should have completed a Ph.D. by the time of their appointment, and possibly have held a post-doctoral fellowship. The successful applicant will join a dynamic research-oriented faculty offering innovative graduate and doctoral programs. The Hebrew University of Jerusalem is an equal opportunities employer.

The deadline for applications is October 2, 2017.
